1 When Spinal Tap first came out, critics thought they were watching a documentary about a British heavy metal band. Then they recognised one of the actors and realised it was just a comedy. It's very funny.

2 Born Free is a true story about a couple who look after three baby lions when their mother is killed. Two of the lions are sent to European zoos but the third, Elsa, stays with them until she is old enough to return to the wild and find a family of her own.

3 The Sting tells the story of some criminals whose friend is killed by a powerful gangster. To punish the gangster, they decide to steal his money. The plot is complicated, but the ending is one of the best ever.

4 Ten Things I Hate About You is a great American teen movie. It is set in a high school and is more romance than comedy. The idea is based on a story by Shakespeare and the acting is excellent.

5 The Fugitive is a good, simple thriller. Harrison Ford is sent to jail for killing his wife. The train taking him to prison crashes and he escapes. The rest of the film is a race to find the real killer. A great story.

6 Fever Pitch is a comedy with romance for the girls and football for the boys. Colin Firth plays a north London school teacher who has two loves in his life: his girlfriend and Arsenal Football Club.

7 Heathers is set in an American high school and stars Winona Ryder and Christian Slater. The two become friends and start murdering some of their classmates, a group of girls all called Heather. This black comedy is very funny in parts.

A: Why do you like them?

B: Well, the <sup>1</sup>_____ reason is that they're so funny. <sup>2</sup>_____ reason is that the people who write limericks sometimes make up words, but you can still understand exactly what they mean. I <sup>3</sup>_____ poems that rhyme to those that don't. I also like Japanese haikus.
